September 19, 2024

On September 18, 2024, Flagstaff Unified School District (FUSD) held a dedication ceremony and traditional Navajo blessing for a newly constructed Navajo Hooghan (Hogan) on the Flagstaff High School campus. This project has been in development since 2018 and was the vision of 2019 Flagstaff High School graduate Justina Slim, who initially proposed the Hooghan as part of her senior Capstone project. Designed to foster student well-being and cultural education, the Hooghan will integrate Diné language, traditions, and ceremonial events into the school community.

"This has been a six-year process, but after overcoming several obstacles, we are here to celebrate," said Dorothy Denetsosie Gishie, FUSD Governing Board member. "This Hooghan will be a space for cultural teachings and ceremonial events, giving Native American students a place to feel at home."

The structure was constructed by Kinney Construction Services (KCS) and designed by Paul Bustamante Architects, featuring traditional log siding, a sand floor, and an east-facing door of cultural importance. The logs were sourced from Utah, with other materials supplied by Arizona vendors, ensuring an

A message from our SUPERINTENDENT

Autumn is officially here — enjoy the changing leaves and crisp autumn air! During the month of October, families and teachers have the opportunity to connect to discuss students' progress during the first quarter of the 2024-2025 school year. Parent-Teacher Conferences are scheduled at all FUSD elementary, middle, and high schools from Monday, October 7, 2024, through Wednesday, October 9, 2024. Please watch for ParentSquare communications from your school and teacher(s) regarding conference appointment sign-ups.

Conferences are a time for teachers to discuss school expectations and academic standards and to review students' attendance, grades, and evidence of learning. Families are encouraged to come prepared with a list of questions they would like to ask during the conference and be ready to share about your students' interests, needs, and the ways your family would like to be engaged with our school communities. By working together, we can create a strong partnership that supports student success.

I hope FUSD's students, families, and educators enjoy the Fall Break on Thursday, October 10, 2024, and Friday, October 11, 2024, when all FUSD schools and offices will be closed. 🌲

Ribbon Cutting Ceremony Celebrates CHS's Mini Auditorium Renovation

September 24, 2024

On September 6, 2024, Flagstaff Unified School District (FUSD) hosted a ribbon-cutting ceremony to mark the completion of Coconino High School's newly remodeled mini auditorium. This exciting renovation, funded by the 2018 and 2022 bond dollars, represents a significant enhancement of the school's facilities.

The auditorium, revamped by CORE Construction, now boasts modern seating and cutting-edge audio-visual technology, transforming it into a professional-grade performance venue. The DLR Group, responsible for the design, incorporated Coconino's black and red school colors, creating an inviting and inspirational space for student performances.

Outside the auditorium, the surrounding plaza has also been updated. Large stone slabs now provide a welcoming gathering space, and the renovation addressed long-standing drainage issues that affected the area. The project, which began in January 2024, also included site upgrades to improve safety, accessibility, and functionality throughout the campus.

Superintendent Michael Penca praised the project as a “huge upgrade” for the school community, noting that the auditorium would offer students a space to shine—whether performing music, comedy, or poetry.

The ceremony was attended by members of the FUSD Bond Oversight Committee, the FUSD Governing Board, and FUSD staff, all of whom played a critical role in overseeing the successful completion of the project. The new spaces are now open for students and staff to enjoy.

“It was an absolute pleasure to be part of this project,” said Callie Gabelman, project manager with KCS. “We got to learn about the tradition, and to be part of something so special for the community is an honor.”

Students from Flagstaff High School and Coconino High School expressed their appreciation for the project, reflecting on its significance for the Native American student body.

“This gives us Native American students a space and makes us feel like we’re at home,” said Madilynn Benally, a senior at Flagstaff High School and president of the Native American Club. “We’re planning to hold our Native American Club meetings in the Hooghan, and it’s a meaningful place for us to gather.”

Westin Jones, a sophomore from Coconino High School who grew up on the Navajo Reservation, shared his appreciation.

“It’s a big opportunity for kids like me, and I’m glad they pushed through for it to be completed,” he said. “It has a lot of meaning to me because I grew up on the reservation, and there’s a special significance to the Hooghan in our culture.”

A private blessing ceremony was held in conjunction with the dedication. The event, closed to the public due to the nature of the Navajo blessing, featured traditional songs, pollen, and cornmeal. Attendees included Flagstaff City Council members, Coconino County officials, and representatives from Native Americans for Community Action Inc., all showing strong support for the project.

“As a graduate of Flagstaff High and a lifelong resident of Flagstaff, I feel incredibly honored to have been part of these discussions,” said Rose Toehe, Coordinator of Indigenous Initiatives at the City of Flagstaff. “To see such a sacred structure rise on this campus for our children and our future is one of the most heartfelt experiences.”

Toehe hopes the Hooghan will foster cultural exchange among students, serving as a place for both Native and non-Native students to gather and learn.

FUSD Superintendent Michael Penca echoed the sentiment, emphasizing the importance of the Hooghan in supporting the cultural and educational needs of Native American students.

“The Hooghan is a living being, iina’, that, when treated with respect, protects its inhabitants,” said Superintendent Penca. “It brings harmony and a sense of welcome for our Native American students and staff, connecting them to their cultural traditions. This Hooghan reflects our ongoing dedication to providing meaningful learning experiences to all students and the community around our sacred San Francisco Peaks.”

FUSD expressed deep gratitude to the many individuals and partners who brought the project to fruition, including Justina Slim’s family, the Flagstaff High School Native American Club, the Native American Education Support Program, FUSD staff, and local construction teams. The Hooghan will now serve as a space for cultural events and educational activities, further enhancing the integration of Native American traditions within Flagstaff High School’s curriculum.

FUSD Honors Five Legendary Teachers at Board Meeting

September 25, 2024

Five exceptional Flagstaff Unified School District (FUSD) educators were honored as Legendary Teachers during a presentation at the district's regular board meeting on September 24, 2024. These educators were recognized for their outstanding contributions to students, colleagues, and the Flagstaff community.

"This is a really exciting thing that we do each year," remarked Assistant Superintendent Lance Huffman as he opened the ceremony. "Thanks for being here to celebrate some of our local celebrities, legends, not just in the classroom, but in our whole district, in our community."

The 2024 honorees were Marilyn Dugi from Leupp Elementary, Kelly Graham from Flagstaff High School, Sarah Hendricks from Thomas

Elementary, Kathryn Lilly from Cromer Elementary, and Donna Natseway from Mount Elden Middle School. Each of these educators was celebrated for their ability to inspire students academically while also making a deep personal impact through their dedication, compassion, and innovative teaching methods.

One of the honorees, Marilyn Dugi, was recognized for creating a learning environment that integrates students' cultural experiences with their academic progress.

"Ms. Dugi creates a classroom environment where students are not only supported academically but also learn within the framework of their cultural experiences, helping her young students grow with confidence and pride in who they are," shared one of her nominators.

Kelly Graham, another honoree, was praised for her positive influence, not only on her students but also on her colleagues and school community.

"Kelly is one of those rare individuals who has that 'it' factor as a teacher and as a human being. Our school is the place it is because of Kelly Graham," remarked Libby Miller, principal of Flagstaff High School.

"Kelly is deserving of this award because she goes beyond the students to impact her colleagues that look up to her and her administration that learns from her," stated David Meyers about Graham.

Sarah Hendricks from Thomas Elementary was described as an extraordinary teacher who brings innovation and warmth to her classroom.

"Sarah's commitment to her students is nothing short of extraordinary. Her teaching methods are both innovative and nurturing, resulting in students who are confident, capable, and ready to take on the challenges of elementary school," a colleague shared.

Katelyn Lilly from Cromer Elementary was recognized for her ability to create a supportive and enriching classroom while fostering strong relationships with students and their families.

"Mrs. Lilly has created a learning environment that meets all her students' needs and strives to share that knowledge with other staff members," stated her nominator, but no name was provided. "Families desire for their students to be in her program because she works diligently to cultivate relationships that go beyond the classroom.”

Rounding out the group of honorees was Donna Natsaway, assistant principal at Mount Elden Middle School, whose long career was marked by compassion, patience, and dedication.

“Donna’s tenure is not just a testament to her longevity, but a testament to her remarkable character,” stated a former colleague. “She is the epitome of patience and kindness, embodying the values of compassion and selflessness in everything she does.”

Nicholas Clement, who has long championed the Legendary Teacher Day program, spoke at the ceremony about the importance of honoring educators who shape the future of their students and their communities.

“This is a very special night,” Clement reflected. “Ten years ago, I retired as a superintendent [of Flowing Wells School District], and I needed to do something to recognize some teachers in my life that really put me on the path.”

Clement emphasized the role of Northern Arizona University in supporting the program, both financially and through their commitment to elevating the teaching profession. Clement gave each honoree a $500 honorarium to have funds used on the honorees for personal enjoyment and not classroom supplies.

“We know it’s not a lot... The only rule is you’ve got to spend it on yourself,” he said.

The evening celebrated more than just the academic success of these teachers—it was a recognition of their lasting influence in the lives of their students, colleagues, and community. As Huffman noted, “These teachers are legends not just in their classrooms but in the hearts of everyone they’ve touched.”

The Legendary Teacher Honors program continues to reflect FUSD’s commitment to recognizing educators who go above and beyond in fostering relationships, engaging deeply with students, and setting high expectations that drive academic and personal growth. 🌟

Tie-Dye Fun at Cromer Elementary

September 6, 2024

At Cromer Elementary School, creativity took center stage during a recent school-wide tie-dye event organized by the Parent-Teacher Organization (PTO). The activity brought a burst of color and a sense of unity as every student had the opportunity to create their own unique Cromer T-shirt. The tie-dye project, spearheaded by PTO President Jes Suzuki, aimed to ensure that every student could take home a piece of school pride – no matter their circumstances.

“One of our goals was to really focus on the kids and doing stuff for the kids to make sure that everybody had something,” explained Suzuki. “So, this year, we wanted to make sure that every student had a Cromer T-shirt.”

To ensure inclusivity, the PTO provided shirts to students who were unable to bring their own, and they supplied all the tie-dye materials.

“We provided the tie-dye and the details that were going to be put on the shirts,” said Suzuki, describing how each student was given a chance to rubber-band their shirts before heading out to the field for the colorful fun.

The entire school participated in this event, with students tie-dyeing their shirts in shifts by grade level. The atmosphere on the field was filled with excitement as students expressed their creativity by splashing vibrant colors onto their shirts. Local firefighters even joined the fun, lending a helping hand to the kids with their tie-dye projects, adding an extra special community touch to the event. This hands-on activity was not just a fun way for students to spend time together but also a memorable way for them to showcase
